General Information

How is the credit for prior year minimum tax calculated? Your credit for 2000 is calculated by subtracting the part of your 1999 Connecticut alternative minimum tax that was attributable to adjustments and items of tax preferences (such as exclusion items) specified in I.R.C. §53(d) from your net Connecticut alternative minimum tax paid in 1999 and adding the result to the amount of credit carried forward from the prior year.

Exclusion items are your federal alternative minimum tax adjustments and preferences for: the standard deduction, itemized deductions (including any investment interest expense reported on federal Schedule E), the deduction for charitable contributions of appreciated property, certain tax-exempt interest, and depletion. For more information, see instructions for federal Form 8801, Credit for Prior Year Minimum Tax - Individuals, Estates, and Trusts.

How may the credit be used? You may be able to reduce your regular Connecticut income tax liability by the amount of your credit. Your credit for 2000 is limited to the amount that your regular Connecticut income tax for 2000, less the credit allowed for income tax paid to a qualifying jurisdiction(s), exceeds your Connecticut alternative minimum tax for 2000, less the credit allowed for alternative minimum tax paid to a qualifying jurisdiction(s).

EXAMPLE: If your 2000 regular Connecticut income tax is $5,000, your credit for income tax paid to a qualifying jurisdiction is $1,000, and your 2000 Connecticut alternative minimum tax is $3,500, your allowable credit is limited to $500 [($5,000 - $1,000) - $3,500 = $500]. If your credit for the prior year's alternative minimum tax is $2,000, you can only use $500 of that credit in 2000. You may carry forward the balance of $1,500 for use in future years.

What happens to the unused portion of the credit? Any unused portion of the credit may be carried forward to reduce your regular Connecticut income tax in future years. You may carry the credit forward until it is completely used. If you are entitled to any additional credit in a subsequent year, you may add that credit to any balance being carried forward from earlier years.
